Introduction¹

There is no formal record of the sede vacante period that followed Veysey's death in October 1554. The archbishopric of Canterbury was also vacant at this time, Cranmer having been deprived in November 1553², and so Nicholas Wotton, dean of Canterbury, was in charge of Exeter's spiritual affairs.³ The vacancy lasted 11 months during which time some 31 admissions to livings are known to have been made.⁴

Veysey's death gave Mary the opportunity to introduce new blood into the diocese. Veysey's successor, James Turberville, was not only a younger man, but he was also part of the new generation of episcopal appointees whose loyalty to catholicism and the Marian regime was not in doubt. He had not held high ecclesiastical office under Henry VIII and so was not tainted by the compromises that many older, senior clergy had had to make in order to appease the king.

Born at or before Christmas 1494, the second surviving son of John Turberville esquire of Bere Regis Dorset, Turberville was admitted to Winchester College in 1507, became a scholar of New College Oxford in 1512 and a full fellow two years later.⁵ He graduated BA in 1516 and MA in 1520. From 1521 to 1524 Turberville was employed as a scribe of the university and acted as a notary public. Ordained priest in 1525, he gained a doctorate of theology by 1531 after a period of study abroad.⁶ In 1529 he resigned his fellowship after becoming rector of Woodmancote in Sussex and was then admitted to the Dorset rectories of Owermoigne (1532) and Lytchett Matravers (1536) and to the prebend of Wittering in Chichester Cathedral (1538) which required him to deliver theological lectures. He also became rector of Hartfield, Sussex in 1541, and a prebendary of Winchester Cathedral in 1549.

Turberville may have owed his advancement to Exeter to Stephen Gardiner, bishop of Winchester and Lord Chancellor. The royal licence to elect Veysey's successor was issued to the Exeter Dean & Chapter on 11 March 1555⁷ and whilst no record of the election has survived it had evidently taken place by 6 May when as bishop elect Turberville was granted custody of the temporalities of the see.⁸ Turberville remained as bishop elect until the autumn when, on 8 September, he was consecrated and took possession of the spiritualities of his diocese.⁹ The delay was probably caused by the need to obtain a papal bull of provision from Rome. The following month, on 9 October, he was enthroned by proxy in Exeter Cathedral.¹⁰

Turberville finally set foot in his diocese in the spring of 1556.¹¹ Over the winter he had been busy in London attending parliament and Cardinal Pole's legatine synod. Once at Exeter he quickly embarked upon a visitation of his cathedral and see and also set up a commission of leading local laymen and clergy to repress heresy and false rumours about the Marian regime.

Turberville was closely involved in implementing Pole's plan for the economic recovery of the English Church.¹² He gathered information about the value of benefices, the number of non-resident priests, the wealth of parishioners and the needs of their churches. And he oversaw the redeployment of clerical tenths to fund the pensions of the ex-religious and chantrists and to supplement the income of the see's poorer incumbents.

Turberville also took a keen interest in the problem of impropriated livings intervening to support the corporation of Totnes' plea to the crown to enhance the vicar's stipend and recommending that the benefice should be served by a resident rector in receipt of both great and small tithes. At Broad Clyst he commenced an action in the court of Chancery when information about the leasing of the rectory proved inadequate.

Much damage had been done to religious life in the parishes of the south-west by the Edwardian commissioners for chantries and church goods. Lands and liturgical gear had been confiscated or concealed whilst fraud and incompetence threatened to frustrate attempts at recovery. Even the Exeter Dean & Chapter was still retrieving ornaments and vestments that had once belonged to the cathedral.

Meanwhile the stock of parish priests was being depleted by disease and deprivation. Some 250 admissions to benefices were made at Exeter during Turberville's episcopate and the vacancy that preceded it. Relatively few resulted from exchanges or resignations. Most worryingly of all the Church was failing to attract new blood. Turberville ordained only 13 individuals to add to the 18 that Coverdale and Veysey in his second spell as bishop had contributed. Recent events, not least the crushing of the Prayer Book rebellion and the abolition of the chantries, had bred up a scepticism at the popular level. There was now open hostility towards things religious and for the first time anti-clericalism became a major force in the diocese.

¹² The following paragraphs are a distillation of Vage, 'Thesis', pp. 50-59.

It is a moot point whether Turberville was aware of the seriousness of this problem. He would, of course, be appreciative of the need to restore 'the beauty of holiness' of religious life, to bring back high altars, rood-lofts and images into the parish churches of the diocese. Yet he may have been deceived by the complaisance that was shown by parishioners in this respect, as he may also have been lulled into a false sense of security by the absence of protestant resistance in the south-west.

At the outset of Mary's reign, the leading supporters of the Edwardian regime had fled abroad. Those who had been left behind had either gone into hiding or had conformed as a result of threats of imprisonment and persecution 'by the cruel justices' of the region. The diocese produced only one martyr, the somewhat pathetic figure of Agnes Prest, whom Foxe himself described as a 'silly woman'.

Doubtless the eagerness of the local magistrates to take the lead in rooting out heresy suited the 'gentle and courteous' Turberville whom even John Hooker conceded was 'nothing cruel nor bloody' in his advocacy of Roman Catholicism. Yet persecution was no substitute for spiritual fervour. Parishioners restored the paraphernalia of catholic worship, but they did so begrudgingly. Gone was the enthusiasm for financing local religious life which had been so evident in the south-west on the eve of the break with Rome.

Turberville's rule ended prematurely with the death of Mary and Pole in November 1558. He remained in office for another nine months but with the wind of change now blowing firmly in the reformist direction he was no more than a lame duck bishop.

Turberville's register is discussed in Appendix 3 of my introduction to Coverdale's register.

fos 1r-2v

18. 9 Oct 1555⁷⁶: Turberville commissions John Blaxton BCnL subdean of Exeter cathedral⁷⁷ to serve as vicar-general and official principal for the present. Blaxton is to take cognisance of, proceed in and adjudicate upon, all ecclesiastical causes including those involving matrimony, by mere office, promoted office and the instance of parties.⁷⁸ He is also to inquire into crimes and excesses and reform them with penalties and penances, impose and relax sequestrations of benefices, admit and induct clergy into livings and assign pensions to incumbents who have resigned their livings. He will grant licences to marry, inquire into rights of patronage and assign coadjutors to clerics who are no longer able to serve their benefices. He will proceed against heresies amongst both the clergy and laity, prove wills and grant letters of administration of those persons who belong to the episcopal jurisdiction and allow clergy convicted of crimes by secular justices to purge themselves.

Power is given to the above-named or to any three of them provided that one of their number is Turberville, Reynolds, Blaxton, Rixman, Sothern, Traves, Grandevile or Yendall.

Reference is made to the 'devilish and slanderous persons' who have 'not only invented, bruted and set forth divers false rumours, tales and seditious slanders against' the king and queen but have also 'sown divers heresies and hurtful opinions and set forth divers seditious books within this our realm of England'. The commissioners are to punish such offenders and suppress their ill-doings.

Specifically they are to take possession of heretical and seditious books, letters and writings, inquire into disturbances in any church or chapel in the diocese and into the removal of goods, ornaments or money belonging to churches. They will also inquire into persons who refuse to be confessed, to receive sacrament at the altar, to hear mass or come to church.

The commissioners have the freedom to impose punishments as they think fit by fine or imprisonment. They are to take bonds and recognizances from every offender and suspect brought before them. Witnesses and suspects are to be examined on oath. Anyone refusing to appear when summoned is to be committed to ward. All difficult and important matters are to be referred to Bishop Bonner of London and his colleagues who have a wider remit. A record of fines, obligations and proceedings is to be kept. Justices, bailiffs, sheriffs and constables are to assist.

³⁹⁹ See 186 and CTRs Part 5 (King's Nympton); Pollard died in May 1558 and was succeeded as archdeacon by Thomas Kent (see Parker Certificate: Holsworthy). Both BRUO 1501-40, p. 456 and Fasti 3, p. 31 suggest that Pollard the archdeacon of Totnes was not the John Pollard who held the archdeacons of Cornwall and Barnstaple in the 1540s. Whilst the position is not without uncertainty, we do know that Pollard the archdeacon of Totnes was also a prebendary of Salisbury and that he died before 18 May 1558. His will survives: it was made on 1 May 1558 and names George Carew archdeacon of Exeter and John Prediaux his cousin as executors. Pollard the archdeacon of Cornwall and Barnstaple was a local man who lost his preferments in 1554 because he was married. In 1555 he made a personal abjuration of his marriage and this rehabilitated him. The other John Pollard came from Worcester diocese and was the archdeacon's junior by about 15 or 20 years. There is no clear evidence that he held any benefices.

The decree obliges those clergy of the province who have benefices, spiritual promotions, goods or pensions worth £30 annually to provide armour for the defence of the realm.⁴²⁷ Turberville is required to publish the decree in his diocese and to certify that he has done so. 172. 19 Apr 1558: For remitting half of the tenth⁴²⁹

Turberville is shown Pole's letter of 1 Apr 1558 dated at Greenwich remitting half of the clerical tenth. In the letter, which is in English, Pole refers to the legislation directing that clerical tenths should be used to pay the pensions of ex-religious. He also refers to the instructions given previously that clergy occupying livings worth less than 20 marks should be exempted from paying tenths from Christmas 1557.⁴³⁰ Pole, mindful of the financial burdens imposed on the clergy by subsidies and by the provision of armour for the defence of the realm, now reduces the tenths that the clergy pay by one half and this, too, is to take effect from Christmas 1557. The accounts of the church for the last two years show 'such an overplus and sum of money' after pensions have been paid that the reduction is more than justified. The cardinal is enclosing articles showing how he intends to redistribute the surpluses to dioceses that are overburdened with pensions. Turberville is instructed to forward any arrears due from his diocese upon the last two accounts ended at Michaelmas 1557 by 5 May together with the money from last year that he has been ordered to keep in chests⁴³¹ and to pay the same 'where at your

248. Composition for the union and annexation of the rectory and vicarage of South Brent made by the bishop of Exeter and others⁶⁴¹

5 May 1559: Turberville acknowledges that South Brent parish is well populated and that the income of the vicar, Philip Phrear⁶⁴², is inadequate. He therefore accedes to Phrear's petition and augments his income by uniting the vicarage with the rectory. The dean and chapter of Christ Church Oxford who are the impropiators of the living and Sir William Petre⁶⁴³ who is the patron are parties to the agreement. Phrear is to receive the rectorial tithes. In return he is to pay the dean and chapter £3 6s 8d. This sum is to be paid every time there is an institution

Common Register of James [Turberville] bishop of Exeter begun on the day of his consecration [8 Sep 1555]

fos 1r-2r

259. 17 Nov 1555: Turberville receives a mandate from Bishop Bonner of London dated 10 Nov telling him that Cardinal Pole has summoned a legatine synod for the southern and northern provinces to meet in the king's chapel at Westminster on 2 Dec 1555. Turberville is to notify his dean and chapter, his four archdeacons and the clergy of his diocese. The dean and archdeacons⁶⁵⁴ are to attend in person whilst the chapter and clergy are to send proxies. Turberville is to confirm receipt and execution of Bonner's mandate and to supply a schedule of the names of those attending. Bonner's mandate (which includes Pole's letters dated 8 November at St James' Palace Westminster) is given in full.

260. 17 Nov 1555: Execution of mandate⁶⁵⁵
Turberville writes to the Exeter Dean & Chapter and the four archdeacons of the diocese informing them about Bonner's mandate which he has received today. His letters are given in full.

fo 3r

261. 29 Nov 1555: Certificate to Cardinal Pole about the execution of his letters⁶⁵⁶
Turberville certifies to Pole that [M] Thomas Reynolds dean of Exeter,⁶⁵⁷ [M] Adam Traves archdeacon of Exeter,⁶⁵⁸ [M] George Harvie archdeacon of Cornwall,⁶⁵⁹ [M] William Fawell archdeacon of Totnes⁶⁶⁰ and [M] Henry Squire archdeacon of Barnstaple⁶⁶¹ will be attending his synod. The certificate is given in full.

262. 3 Dec 1555: Turberville in London absolves Augustus Crosse formerly vicar of Modbury from his sentence of excommunication. Crosse was a married priest who had been admitted to Modbury during Edward's reign.⁶⁶² At Mary's accession he had lost his living and had been suspended from exercising the office of priest. On Sat 30 Nov after matins Crosse performed public penance in St Nicholas' Church in the city of London. Turberville now restores him to the office of priest and letters testimonial to this effect are issued. The letters are given in full. M John Blaxton⁶⁶³ and M John Bucke⁶⁶⁴ are witnesses.

263. 20 Dec 1555: [M] Thomas Sotherne⁶⁶⁵ surrogate for Blaxton, vicar-general and official principal of Turberville, at Exeter issues letters compulsory to Hugh Langworthie chaplain obliging him to serve Buckland-in-the-Moor chapel.⁶⁶⁶

264. 9 Jan 1556: Sotherne licenses Thomas Denys of Petrockstow and Margaret daughter of Thomas Tremayne of Kilkhampton to solemnize their marriage after only one reading of banns.

265. 10 Jan 1556: Sotherne in his house in the southern part of the cemetery of Exeter cathedral enacts the dispensation for consanguinity that Cardinal Pole has granted to enable Gregory Cowche and Joanna Blynche widow to marry. The dispensation and enactment which are copied in full are witnessed by [M] Robert Fisher clerk official of the archdeacon of Barnstaple and Richard Bryttell layman. Thomas Bordfilld np of Exeter diocese is the scribe⁶⁶⁷ who attests the validity of the dispensation and proceedings.

275. 11 Feb 1556: William Gere of Marazion shows [Thomas] Bordfilld, Turberville's registrar⁶⁷¹, a grant of the next presentation to the office of provost or warden of the collegiate church or chapel of the king of St Buryan made by Henry VIII to William Leth DCL, Ralph Sadler and William Leth.⁶⁷² The grant is given in full.⁶⁷³

⁶⁶⁸ See Veysey restored 3.

⁶⁷⁰ The negotiations proved unfruitful: Stephens became rector of Kelly instead (see 59, 110 and CTRs Part 4: Lezant).

⁶⁷¹ 'audience registrar'; see Veysey 1828.

⁶⁷² The grant was made in 1536 (L&P, xi 489).

⁶⁷³ This is an incomplete entry which ends halfway down the page; the marginal rubric has 'Caveat for free chapel of St Buryan'. It is likely that the death (or impending demise) of Thomas Baugh alias Williams the last pre-Reformation dean (or warden) of St Buryan was responsible for Gere entering the caveat (see CTRs Part 5: St Buryan and Orme, VCH, pp. 169-70).

275A.⁶⁷⁴ 28 Feb 1557: Turberville grants the office of bailiff of Lawhitton manor to John Globerrye for life with an annuity of £2 0s 0d. The Exeter Dean & Chapter confirm the grant on 11 Feb 1559.

275B.⁶⁷⁵ 27 Apr 1557: Turberville in his palace at Exeter cancels the £40 annuity that Thomas Lord Darcy agreed to pay bishops of Exeter when Bishop Veysey alienated the episcopal manors of Crediton and Morchard Bishop to him in 1548.⁶⁷⁶ The Exeter Dean & Chapter confirm Turberville's cancellation on 8 May.

275C.⁶⁷⁷ 20 May 1558: Turberville leases barton land called Goverlowe Park in Pawton manor in Cornwall to Christopher Richards and his sons Henry and Richard for 60 years at an annual rent of 12s 0d. The Exeter Dean & Chapter confirm the grant on 23 Jul.

275D.⁶⁷⁸ 26 May 1558: Turberville grants Mark Bagwill the office of custos and bailiff of the bishop's palace for life.⁶⁷⁹ The grant includes the episcopal gaol, St Stephen's fee⁶⁸⁰ and a £4 pension.

275E.⁶⁸¹ 18 Nov 1558: Turberville leases Crediton manor to his nephew Nicholas for 12 years from last Michaelmas⁶⁸² at an annual rent of £150.⁶⁸³ The Exeter Dean & Chapter confirm the grant on 20 May 1559.

275F.⁶⁸⁴ 10 Dec 1558: Turberville grants the office of bailiff of Crediton manor to Nicholas Turberville his nephew for life with an annuity of £12s 0d paid out of the revenues of the manor. The Exeter Dean & Chapter confirm the grant on 11 Feb 1559.

⁶⁷⁴ ECA, D&C.3551, fo 306r-v.

⁶⁷⁵ Ibid, fos 303r-04r.

⁶⁷⁶ See Veysey . The cancellation was part of a deal arranged twelve months earlier. Darcy had quickly exchanged Crediton and Morchard Bishop with Edward VI for estates in Suffolk. Darcy continued to pay the annuity but it was no longer secured on property in the event of default. In 1556, to regularise the situation, Darcy granted a new annuity tied to his Suffolk properties and Turberville in return agreed to cancel the original annuity (ECA, D&C.3551, fos 299r-302v).
