

Clerical Taxation Returns for the Pre-Reformation Diocese of Exeter Part 5: the 1531 Clerical Subsidy

J A Vage

c 2022

Introduction¹

This is the largest and most comprehensive of the pre-Reformation tax returns covering all four archdeaconries of the diocese. Exeter Cathedral Archives D&C.3688 is a fair copy collector's book for the 1531 subsidy and contains the names, preferments and tax assessments of over 1200 clergy.² Similar returns exist for the sees of Bath & Wells, Coventry & Lichfield and Rochester.³

Background

Frustrated by his inability to persuade the papacy to grant him a divorce from his wife Catherine of Aragon, Henry VIII went on the offensive in the autumn of 1530.⁴ Cardinal Wolsey, the symbol of papal authority in England, was removed from office as Lord Chancellor and together with a number of leading clerics was charged with illegally exercising ecclesiastical jurisdiction. Soon the attack was broadened to include the entire clerical workforce. Hastily re-convened in January 1531, Canterbury Convocation quickly discovered that the price of a royal pardon would be the acknowledgement of Henry as supreme head of the English Church and the granting of a £100000 subsidy.⁵ Whilst the former rankled amongst senior clerics, the latter proved more palatable and was approved within three days.

The terms of the grant were almost identical to those of the previous subsidy which had been levied in 1523.⁶ All clerics and ecclesiastical corporations were to pay a graduated tax based on their annual income.⁷ Individuals and institutions with an income of £8 or more were to pay half of their income, those with an income of less than £8 were to pay a third whilst those in extreme poverty were to pay a quarter. Aliens had to pay double. As a preliminary bishops were to hold inquisitions to determine the annual value of cathedrals, colleges, hospitals, religious houses, benefices, pensions, stipends and chantries. They were also to appoint 'petty' and vice-collectors who would remit the proceeds of the tax to the archbishop of Canterbury's collector-in-chief, the bishop of London.⁸

² I am grateful to the Exeter Dean & Chapter for permission to publish the return. See below for a discussion of the size of the clerical workforce.

⁴ Scarisbrick, Henry VIII, pp. 357-60.

⁵ This equates to over £44 million in today's money according to an algorithm on The National Archives website; Northern Convocation granted £18840 (Dickens, English Reformation, p. 150).

⁶ The following is based on TNA, E.179 Database, document notes for 1531 grant. LPL, CM.I/83A is a draft of the subsidy act.

⁸ 'Petty' is the term used for episcopal collectors in the archbishop's account rolls (see Appendix 1).

To sweeten the pill the subsidy was to be paid in five equal annual instalments beginning on 25 March 1532. This was reduced to four in 1535 when the king cancelled the final instalment following the passage of the act of first fruits and tenths which gave him access to a much larger and more regular source of clerical taxation. It was also agreed that 10000 marks (£6666 13s 4d) could be held over in arrears until 1537. By the end of 1538 most of the subsidy had been paid.⁹ But this disguises the widespread opposition that the tax provoked especially amongst the lower clergy. When Bishop Stokesley of London attempted to assess his stipendiaries and parish chaplains in August 1531 riots ensued.

There are no reports of disturbances in Exeter diocese but it is clear that the subsidy was deeply unpopular. William Turner, a priest of Launceston, was alleged to have spoken against the tax when he and other stipendiaries were being assessed for the deferred arrears in 1536.¹⁰ Bishop Veysey was in trouble with the crown for his collectors' dilatoriness and over 150 clerics were threatened with arrest after standing excommunicate for more than 40 days following their refusal to pay their instalments.¹¹

The manuscript

The book has 37 paper folios which are stitched together. It measures 12 inches by 9. Only a stub remains of the first folio which is the front cover. The remaining folios have been foliated in a modern hand. Folios 11 and 36 are blank. The latter forms the back cover. The condition of the book is good and the entries are legible.

There is no return for Honiton deanery. This seems to be the result of scribal oversight. Three parishes from the deanery are recorded in Plymtree deanery which itself lacks several of its livings.¹² Possibly the copyist was distracted and omitted a page of his notes.

Editorial practice and analysis

I have kept the tabular format of the original. Column 1 contains the modern foliation, column 2 the names of parishes, chapelries, chantries and ecclesiastical corporations, column 3 the names of individuals and column 4 the amounts they were assessed to pay.

⁹ See Appendix 1.

¹¹ See below.

¹² Rousdon, Colyton and Uplyme are the three parishes.

We do not have a title or date for the book, but it is likely that it is related to the postponed arrears due for payment in December 1537.¹³ These were still outstanding at the end of the following year when the crown ordered Veysey and his chancellor Thomas Brerewood to inquire into the work of their collectors.¹⁴ It is possible that the book may have been produced at this stage.

Veysey and Brerewood's report of February 1539 casts light upon the organization of the subsidy in the south-west.¹⁵ Thomas Chard, abbot of Forde, was collector for the first instalment whilst John Tucker, abbot of Buckland, was responsible for the remaining three. The abbots of Hartland (Thomas Pope), Tavistock (John Peryn) and Dunkeswell (John Ley) and the prior of Bodmin (Thomas Wandesworth alias Mundy) took charge of the postponed arrears.¹⁶ But it was their deputies who probably did most of the work. John Tucker's brother and John Crofte, Veysey's registrar, are named in the report.¹⁷ They co-ordinated the agents on the ground who sought out reluctant contributors some of whom had fled the diocese.

The yield from the four instalments was £6127 of which £1624 was outstanding according to central records.¹⁸ However, Crofte was able to reduce this by over £1000. The situation of the postponed arrears was less satisfactory. The expected yield was £347 10s 0d but only £103 4s 3d had been definitely collected. The abbot of Dunkeswell may well have had some money to declare but had failed to respond to Veysey's urgings. This was not surprising because he had just surrendered his monastery to the crown and was effectively out of a job. The abbots of Hartland and Tavistock and the prior of Bodmin had also stopped work for the same reason and so most of the supplement had gone uncollected.¹⁹

The subsidy book is not a snapshot of the clergy of the diocese at any one particular moment. Richard Dycher vicar of Aylesbeare, John Keyton vicar of Yealmpton and Stephen Whytt rector of Manaton-in-the-Moor all appear in the return but whilst Dycher and Keyton had left their livings by May 1537 Whytt was not instituted until October 1538. There are a dozen or so other admissions and vacancies that fall within this eighteen month period. Some of these men may have agreed to be responsible for the tax either to gain preferment or to move to other benefices more easily.²⁰

¹⁵ See Appendix 3.

¹⁶ See Veysey 1712 and 1713.

¹⁷ Crofte was registrar from at least 1526 until his death in 1547.

¹⁸ See Appendix 1.

¹⁹ Supplement was the official name for the postponed arrears; for this and the dates of dissolution see Appendix 3. In Apr 1539 Veysey passed the responsibility for collecting the arrears to the Exeter Dean & Chapter (see Veysey 1731).

²⁰ Subsidy in Diocese of Lincoln, ed Salter, pp. iii-iv.

Despite the apparent completeness of the survey, it is not easy to establish the number of clergy in the diocese at this time. The figure of 1200 mentioned earlier is not the total of individual clergy but the number of individual tax assessments which includes ecclesiastical corporations.²¹ Many clerics held more than one post and so there is an element of double-counting. There is also the problem of under-recording. As we have seen Honiton and Plymtree deaneries are not fully reported whilst junior staff of corporations are also under-represented. Some dependent chapelries have been omitted whilst a number of low-ranking clerics may have escaped mention because of their (deliberate) invisibility to the authorities. The assessments that lack names are perhaps a symptom of this last problem.

It may be tentatively suggested that the secular clergy of the diocese numbered 1200 in the 1530s.²² This allows for some 200 pluralists recorded in the subsidy book being offset by a similar number of unreported clerics.²³ To these should be added 300 or so monastics who (apart from the heads of religious houses) do not individually appear in the subsidy.²⁴ Perhaps a fifth of the combined total of 1500 clergy were university men. Three hundred and forty eight assessments are for men who can be linked (sometimes tenuously) to Oxbridge or elsewhere. Again a number of these were pluralists.

Finally we need to consider the clerics who resisted the subsidy to the point of being threatened with arrest by the secular authorities. Once again the picture is clouded because we cannot be certain that all of Veysey's significations (or notifications) have survived. But taking what we have at face value, it is clear that clerical resistance reached its peak in 1535 with the fourth instalment of the subsidy and that over the period of the subsidy as a whole 150 significations were issued, a handful of which involved repeat offenders.

Thirty-seven men appear in both Appendix 4 and the subsidy book which suggests that they (and no doubt others) had made their peace with the authorities. Tax evasion was a recognised form of protest in the later middle ages and is to be contrasted with the type of opposition that surfaced in the 1540s when religious changes (as opposed to fiscal innovations) led to widespread rebellion in the south-west. Only a small number of clerics were prepared to risk their lives for the cause of ideology compared to the many others who were content to show their displeasure through the time-honoured medium of a taxpayer strike.²⁵

²¹ The precise figure is 1246.

²² This is a conservative estimate: the total may well have been greater: see Introduction Part 6.

²³ My figure of pluralists is a rough guess.

²⁴ My number of monastics is taken from Snell, Suppression of Religious Foundations, pp. 123-30.

²⁵ There is no correlation between those clerics who were involved in the 1549 Prayer Book rebellion and those who were excommunicated for refusing to pay their taxes.

⁷⁵⁶ 1530-49d (Veysey 477 and 1187); Cowle probably continued as minister after the college's dissolution and was succeeded on his death by Robert Taylor a former fellow of the college (Snell, Devon Chantry Certificates, p. xvii).

⁷⁵⁷ Presumably one of the fellows of the college; he had left by the time of the college's dissolution.

⁷⁵⁸ Occ stipendiary Woodleigh deanery 1534 (TNA, E.36/64, p. 32); presumably another of the fellows who had left by 1545 and probably related to John Jefferey (Snell, Devon Chantry Certificates, p. xvii; see below Ugborough).

⁷⁵⁹ 1534-40r (Veysey 675 and 888); STP but not in Emden; prebendary of Probus 1534-34r (Veysey 660 and 674); kinsman of John Gybbons chancellor of Exeter Cathedral (see above Exeter Cathedral) whom he succeeded at Plymouth (L&P, viii. no.676); thanked Thomas Cromwell for writing to Bishop Veysey on his behalf to release him from the pension that he agreed to pay Gybbons out of the revenues of the vicarage (ibid; Veysey 675).

⁷⁶⁰ Ord priest 1524 (Database 3); occ stipendiary Plymouth 1540 (see Part 6); occ incumbent of Rood chantry Plymouth 1548, commissioners for dissolution allowed him to continue as curate (Orme, 'Dissolution', p. 122).

⁷⁶¹ Or possibly Hernener.

¹²³¹ Originally a priory, in the early fifteenth century St Michael's became an archpresbytery staffed by three chaplains who were employees of Syon Abbey to whom the former priory's endowments had been granted by Henry VI; the senior chaplain was called archpriest; John Arscott occ archpriest 1537-48 when the archpresbytery was dissolved by the chantry commissioners (Orme, VCH, pp. 234, 239; see Coverdale 11).

¹²³² Anciently a collegiate church, St Buryan and its dependent chapelries of Sennen and St Levan became a royal peculiar in the fourteenth century. Its deans were appointed by the crown and they in turn chose the three prebendaries who with themselves comprised the college. The prebends were named Rospanel, Trethyn and Small. There was also a king's priest who served the college. Deans of St Buryan exercised ecclesiastical jurisdiction independently of the bishops of Exeter and continued to do so in later centuries despite the college and prebends being dissolved by the chantry commissioners. Throughout the later medieval and early modern periods services at St Buryan, Sennen and St Levan were conducted by chaplains appointed by the deans (see Orme, VCH, pp. 163-71).

Appendix 1

Lambeth Palace Library CM.I/80 and CM.I/83 are two account rolls for the 1531 subsidy. They record the assessments for the dioceses of Canterbury Province, the deductions claimed (the remission of the final instalment, payments received from local collectors and a number of minor adjustments) and the arrears outstanding. CM.I/83 is an earlier version of CM.I/80 because its arithmetic is corrected using figures taken from the latter. The rolls are undated but it is likely that CM.I/80 was produced towards the end of 1538 since its figure of arrears for Exeter is identical to the sums mentioned in Veysey's report of early 1539.¹³⁴⁶

The rolls were compiled from 'books' which were presumably the records of the inquisitions that bishops held prior to levying the subsidy.¹³⁴⁷ They are interim statements and their information was subject to change as news and money reached London. This may explain the imperfect arithmetic of CM.I/80. The sums deductible total £1000 more than the deductions sub-total.

¹³⁴¹ 1534-39 when surrendered priory at dissolution and granted £66 13s 4d pension (Smith, Heads, p. 383; Snell, Suppression of Religious Foundations, p. 383); from London, monk of Merton Priory who in 1518 occ canon of Launceston (Orme, VCH, pp. 151-54); vicar of Lanlivery 1540-47dep (Veysey 875 and 1120); rector of St Leonard's Foster Lane London 1544-47dep (Orme, VCH, p. 153); tried and convicted of treason 1547, condemned to be hanged but sentence reduced to imprisonment in the Tower and loss of benefices (ibid); will made Feb 1549 and proved (PCC) 6 Feb 1555 showed that he was owed large sums of money by a number of Cornish worthies (TNA, PROB.11/37/253); nephew and niece married into Prideaux family and granted long leases of former manors of Bodmin Priory (Orme, VCH, p. 153).

¹³⁴² See Part 4 (Talland).

¹³⁴³ Probably Laurence Casteltown (see Part 4).

¹³⁴⁴ See Part 4 Appendix (Gulval); St John's was a hospital caring for the short-term sick or long-term infirm who were not lepers (Orme, VCH, pp. 192-94); a common institution throughout England, the hospital was the only one of its kind in Cornwall; the appointment of priors or wardens was in the hands of the archdeacons of Cornwall; by the early sixteenth century the office had become a sinecure.

¹³⁴⁵ Torn remains of blank folio.

Appendix 2¹³⁴⁹

Commission under privy signet to the person addressed to examine the abbots of Forde and Buckland, collectors of the clerical subsidy in Exeter diocese, and the abbots of Tavistock, Dunkeswell, Hartland, and the prior of Bodmin, collectors of the supplement to the same there, concerning the arrears of these subsidies, which should have been paid to the bishop of London before 1 March 28 Henry VIII [1536] and 24 December 29 Henry VIII [1537] respectively. Certificate to be made before the last of February next. Richmond theember [1538].

Appendix 3¹³⁵⁰

John Veysey bishop of Exeter and Thomas Brerwod to the King and Council

On receipt at Crediton Devon 1 February of the enclosed commission, we sent copies thereof to every collector named in it, commanding them to be with us at Exeter by 24 February. The abbots of Forde and Buckland appeared not, although by their vice-collectors it appears that in August 28 Henry VIII [1536] the arrearages upon the abbot of Forde, collector for the first year of the subsidy, were £171 7s 1½d and upon the abbot of Buckland, collector in three years, £1453 2s 3¼d. For exoneration of the latter John Crofte, vice-collector, showed three acquittances made by the bishop of London, in May and October 29 Henry VIII [1537], amounting to £402 5s 4d, and said that he and one Tucker, the abbot's brother, had £200 more ready for the bishop of London. The vice-collectors to the two abbots demand allowances, ie £55 18s 2d, taxed on the benefices of Adam Travers and Peter Ligham clerks, exempt from the general pardon and by act of parliament exonerate of the subsidy;¹³⁵¹ £179 16s 9d upon stipendiary priests who have fled the diocese or died without goods; £197 13s 1d for collection of the subsidy during four years, 8d in the pound.

As to the supplement mentioned in the said commission which the four collectors should have paid to the bishop of London in December 29 Henry VIII [1537], three of them, the prior of Bodmin and the abbots of Hartland and Tavistock, confess to have £103 4s 3d. We know not what the abbot of Dunkeswell has, for whom we have often sent but he comes not. *The residue of the supplement remaineth yet upon divers of the clergy as the said collectors affirmeth which now stay to collect for that some of them have surrendered and consigned their monasteries into [the king's] hands.*¹³⁵² Exeter, the last day of February [1539].

Endorsed: 30 Henry VIII [1539]

The following table lists the significations that Bishop Veysey sent to Chancery seeking the arrest of those members of his clergy who had been excommunicated for refusing to pay the 1531 subsidy and who had remained contumacious for 40 days. The date of issue of the significations is shown in column 3 whilst the final column shows which subsidy instalment had given rise to the offence.
