

Clerical Taxation Returns for the Pre-Reformation Diocese of Exeter Part 6: the 1540 Clerical Subsidy

J A Vage

c 2024

Introduction¹

This is the last in my series of pre-Reformation taxation returns for the clergy of Exeter diocese. It is exclusively devoted to the curates, chantrists and chaplains who served in the parishes of the south-west and who were collectively known as stipendiaries because they were paid wages for their work. Bishop Veysey's return gives us an opportunity to view them as a group before many of their employments were abolished by the Chantries Acts of 1545 and 1547.

Background

Convocation granted the king a subsidy in the spring of 1540.² It was the first since the passage of the act of first fruits and tenths in 1534 which imposed higher and more frequent levels of taxation on the clergy. It was also the first since the deeply unpopular great subsidy of 1531, parts of which were still outstanding in 1538.³

The subsidy was to be collected over two years. Both beneficed and unbeneficed clerics were taxed. The former were to pay 10% of their income each year⁴ whilst the latter were charged an annual rate of 6s 8d. Bishops and their agents were responsible for collecting the subsidy. The due date for payment was Christmas and receipts were to be sent to the court of first fruits and tenths by 1 April following.

Bishops were required to certify the names and wages of their unbeneficed clergy to the Exchequer by 2 February in each of the two years. Our return is Veysey's first certificate for Exeter diocese.⁵

The manuscript

The return is a parchment book measuring 300mm by 130mm which has 22 unnumbered folios including the covers.⁶ 'Exon' is written on its front. It is in good condition and legible. Very likely it is a contemporaneous copy of Veysey's certificate made by the scribes of the first fruits and tenths office.

The return occupies 19 folios and begins with a short address from Veysey to the barons of the Exchequer confirming that he has carried out parliament's orders. The stipendiaries are listed by parish, deanery and archdeaconry. Details of their employers are given but not their wages. An addendum lists those beneficed clergy who were claiming exemption from the subsidy because they had paid their first year's income (or first fruits) to the crown within the last 12 months.⁷

³ See Introduction to Part 5.

⁴ 'Income' is the valuation contained in the 1535 Valor Ecclesiasticus less a deduction for the tenths that incumbents paid annually under the terms of the 1534 act.

Frances Rose-Troup transcribed (sometimes erroneously) the Devon portion of Veysey's return in the early 1930s.⁸ She used it (and two other slightly later listings)⁹ to cast light on the fate of former monks following the dissolution of their monasteries. She did not mention, and perhaps did not realise, that the return was principally a record of clerical taxation.

Editorial practice and analysis

I have adapted the tabular format of the original. Column 1 contains my foliation of the return and totals of stipendiaries for each page of the return.¹⁰ Column 2 lists the parishes and chapelries served by the stipendiaries whilst columns 3 and 4 names the clerics and their employers. As on previous occasions, graduate clergy are shown in italics.

According to the return there were 672 stipendiaries in the diocese in 1540 each contributing 6s 8d to the subsidy. The total yield - £224 – equates to over £95000 in today's money.¹¹ The stipendiaries were distributed as follows:

| Archdeaconry of Exeter | Archdeaconry of Totnes | Archdeaconry of Barnstaple | Archdeaconry of Cornwall |
|------------------------|------------------------|----------------------------|--------------------------|
| 162 | 158 | 96 | 256 |
| Devon | | | Cornwall |
| 316 | | | 256 |

These are almost certainly conservative figures. Only 386 parishes are mentioned in the return when the later medieval diocese had nearly 600 mother churches.¹² It is difficult to believe that at least some of the omitted parishes did not need stipendiaries to help with the labour intensive ceremonies of catholicism.¹³

The return is largely silent about the type of work the stipendiaries did. However, it is a reasonable assumption, borne out by evidence from earlier returns and elsewhere, that those employed by incumbents and impropiators

⁹ TNA, E.101/75/9 (pensions paid to ex-chantrists 1548) and E.178/3224 (pensions paid to ex-religious 1570).

¹⁰ These are in roman numerals in the manuscript and were probably added by the first fruits and tenths office to check that Veysey's figure of tax due was correct.

¹¹ I have used an algorithm on the TNA website.

¹² ie rectories, vicarages and perpetual curacies: see Database 4. The return also includes 49 dependent chapelries and the extra-parochial St Michael's Mount.

¹³ We do not know how Veysey compiled his return. There would not have been any central record of stipendiaries apart from visitation call books which were compiled every three years and which were often out of date. Stipendiaries held annual contracts of employment and therefore could easily move from parish to parish.

(farmers) were curates whilst those hired by parishioners, churchwardens and lay notables were chantrists or chaplains celebrating at a shrine or serving a religious fraternity.

At least 65 stipendiaries were former monks or friars¹⁴ who had been licensed to serve as parish clergy following the dissolution of their houses. They were welcome recruits helping to offset the decline in ordinands caused by the ending of monastic titles.¹⁵ At least 93 stipendiaries went on to become rectors and vicars.¹⁶ But the majority either remained as curates or were forced into early retirement by the Chantries Acts.

¹⁴ Nineteen of the 65 were friars. My research has increased the number of ex-religious identified by Frances Rose-Troup.

¹⁵ See Neville, pp. 36-37.

¹⁶ A further three held benefices which they resigned before becoming stipendiaries.

forced to leave Oxford early because of poverty and accept a cure of souls in his own part of the country. Coincidentally both Crispyns died in 1550 and left wills that have survived. It is likely that the two men were related and were also kinsmen of Richard Crispyn the Exeter Cathedral prebendary who died in the Tower for opposing Edward VI's reformation: see Part 5 (Harberton). Stoye suggests that our Edmund Crispyn may have been killed in the Prayer Book rebellion but as his death occurred in the autumn of 1550 this seems unlikely. DHC, Moger Wills, 6, pp. 1690-91 is a transcript of his will which reveals that he was born at Holbeton; see also Pinilla and Nelson, 'Una Carta', p. 519. I am grateful to Dr Sophie Vezier for these references.
